All beings are overwhelmed by the appearance of the world that appeals to them in many ways. In life, the tendency to yield to individual likes and dislikes takes root to such an extent that many have no time to contemplate other issues. The Gita states that this engagement with raga and dvesha builds continuous stress in one's life, and keeps one away from enjoying the benefits of peace of mind which is each one's entitlement.

When one depends on an internal law and guidance, there is inner harmony derived from his dedication to work but detachment from the fruits of his efforts. The Gita advises people to rise above likes and dislikes and not be a slave to the senses. Instead, one should try to pursue atma jnana.

The Vedas teach that the soul is divine, only held in the bondage of matter; and perfection will be reached when this bond will burst, and the word they use for it is therefore, Mukti i.e. freedom, freedom from the bonds of imperfection, freedom from death and misery.

Janhit Abhiyan: Locating the reservation for Economically Weaker Sections in the Constitutional Scheme of India

Gaurav Mehrotra

The concept of reservation for certain classes of people is one unique feature of the Indian Constitution. After independence, during the constitutional assembly debates, the drafters of the Constitution noted the oppression and discrimination faced by certain classes of society which led to social ostracization and educational backwardness for these classes of people. Considering this oppression, the drafters decided to insert sub-part (4) to Article 15 of the Constitution of India which allowed for special provisions to be made in favour of those classes of citizens who faced social and educational backwardness due to historical oppression. This paved the way for reservation policies in favour of SCs, STs and OBCs being implemented. Pertinently, such a policy as envisaged under Article 15(4) does not cover those persons who are part of the Unreserved category but are presently incapable of affording a quality education or social life. With a view to remedy this, the Central Government in 1991, by way of an executive order, introduced a reservation of 10% in favour of those persons who were not covered by other reservation policies and were economically weak. This was struck down by the Supreme Court in the judgement of Indra Sawhney vs. Union of India wherein it laid down two major principles regarding reservation: 1) The total reservation cannot be more than 50% of what is available; and 2) Reservation cannot be made on economic criteria alone.

However, the law is always evolving as it attempts to shape how society is structured. The Sinho Committee was constituted in 2006 to look into the feasibility of providing reservation to Economically Backward Classes. The committee submitted its findings in 2010 wherein it noted that while the percentage of poor belonging to Unreserved category was outweighed by the percentage of poor in Reserved categories, those belonging to the Unreserved category were more 'backward' in other aspects such as literacy, malnutrition, health and hygiene etc and in light of the same, recommended various steps to be taken by the government in order to allow economic and educational upliftment of those who were identified as Economically backward classes. In furtherance of these recommendations as well as the idea of economically uplifting the citizens as per Article 46 of the Constitution of India, the Government of India introduced the 103rd Constitution (Amendment) Act, 2019 by which Articles 15 and 16 of the Constitution were amended to allow policies favouring economically weaker citizens to be introduced. It is important to note that the amended Articles themselves stated that the policies could not reserve more than 10% of what was offered, a qualification which is not present in Article 15(4), 15(5) or 16(4) of the Constitution. Notably, in light of this Amendment Act, a Government Order dated 18.02.2019 was issued by the Uttar Pradesh Government which introduced a 10% reservation for persons whose annual family income was below Rs 8 lakhs, belonged to the Unreserved category and who were not otherwise excluded as per the qualifications in the Government Order itself. implementation of the EWS Scheme, it gives a template for what may be implemented by other states. The salient features of the Order are the income limit fixed at 8 lakhs, the disqualifications based on land ownership and that the seats being reserved for the EWS would be added over and above the seats already reserved for other classes. Subsequently, in 2020, an Act known as Uttar Pradesh Public Service (Reservation for Economically Weaker Sections) Act, 2020 was enacted.

Upon passage of the 103rd Constitution (Amendment) Act by the Parliament, the same was challenged by way of a Writ petition filed before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court framed the key issues of the matter as follows:

- (1) Whether the 103rd Constitution Amendment can be said to breach the basic structure of the Constitution by permitting the State to make special provisions, including reservation based on economic criteria?
- (2) Whether the 103rd Constitution Amendment can be said to breach the basic structure of the Constitution by permitting the State to make special provisions in relation to admission to private unaided institutions?
- (3) Whether the 103rd Constitution Amendment can be said to breach the basic structure of the Constitution in excluding the SEBCs/OBCs/SCs/STs from the scope of EWS Reservation?

In light of the arguments advanced by the parties, the Supreme Court by a majority of 3:2 held that reservation as a policy is an instrument of affirmative action by the State, it is meant to reduce the disadvantages of any class that faces disadvantages and consequently uplift their status in society. Therefore, reservation which is based solely on economic criteria is not violative of the essential features of the Constitution nor does it damage the basic structure of the Constitution. Further, the Supreme Court held that the exclusion of the classes covered by Articles 15(4), 15(5) and 16(4) of the Constitution from the ambit of Articles 15(6) and 16(6) does not violate the Equality Code of the Constitution because it balances the requirements of non-discrimination and compensatory discrimination. Moreover, the Supreme Court held that the 50% cap on reservation is not inflexible, and it only applies to the reservations envisaged by Articles 15(4), 15(5) and 16(4) of the Constitution, and therefore an additional reservation of 10% being made for economically weaker section of society would not violate any essential feature of the Constitution.

Cyber Crime

Cybercrime, also called computer crime, the use of a computer as an instrument to further illegal ends, such as committing fraud, trafficking in child pornography and intellectual property, stealing identities, or violating privacy. Cybercrime, especially through the Internet, has grown in importance as the computer has become central to commerce, entertainment, and government

Defining cybercrime

New technologies create new criminal opportunities but few new types of crime. What distinguishes cybercrime from traditional criminal activity? Obviously, one difference is the use of the digital computer, but technology alone is insufficient for any distinction that might exist between different realms of criminal activity. Criminals do not need a computer to commit fraud, traffic in child pornography and intellectual property, steal an identity, or violate someone's privacy. All those activities existed before the "cyber" prefix became ubiquitous. Cybercrime, especially involving the Internet, represents an extension of existing criminal behaviour alongside some novel illegal activities.

Types of cybercrime

Cybercrime ranges across a spectrum of activities. At one end are crimes that involve fundamental breaches of personal or corporate privacy, such as assaults on the integrity of information held in digital depositories and the use of illegally obtained digital information to blackmail a firm or individual. Also at this end of the spectrum is the growing crime of identity theft. Midway along the spectrum lie transaction-based crimes such as fraud, trafficking in child pornography, digital piracy, money laundering, and counterfeiting. These are specific crimes with specific victims, but the criminal hides in the relative anonymity provided by the Internet. Another part of this type of crime involves individuals within corporations or government bureaucracies deliberately altering data for either profit or political objectives. At the other end of the spectrum are those crimes that involve attempts to disrupt the actual workings of the Internet. These range from spam, hacking, and denial of service attacks against specific sites to acts of cyberterrorism—that is, the use of the Internet to cause public disturbances and even death. Cyberterrorism focuses upon the use of the Internet by nonstate actors to affect a nation's economic and technological infrastructure. Since the September 11 attacks of 2001, public awareness of the threat of cyberterrorism has grown dramatically.

I Have Learned

People have been coming to the wise man,
Complaining about the same problem at every me.
One day he told them a joke and everyone roared in laughter.

Aer a couple of minutes, he told them a same the joke and only a few of them smiled.

Whenhe told them the same joke at the third me, NO
ONE LAUGHED ANY MORE!

“You can’t laugh at the same joke over and over.

So why are you always crying
about the same problem?”

I have learned we shouldn't be worry for something.

Earth! Are you well?

Hey! mother Earth,

Are you well?

We are really sorry for our behaviour,

But you are the only planet where we have to dwell.

No human,

I am not well..

After mindlessly destroying the resources, you expect me to tell?

The friends are lost,

Chirping of birds, whistle of flowing river, that adds to to my life most.

I provided you the rain, breezes, that are so calming,

In return, I just got Global Warming.

Being your Mother Earth,

I request you to plant more trees instead of industries,

Otherwise you won't be able to find me even in histories.

I always made sure of you being happily alive,

But you are never grateful for this wonderful life.

Sorry mother Earth, for becoming so worst,

I realised, You are the one whom we can trust.

We promise you to mend our ways and do our best,

But don't leave us alone on the rest..

Pollution and Solution

Pollution as is described is the addition of substances to the environment faster than the environment can dispose, recycle, decompose, or store in a harmless state.

There are different types of pollution and includes water, soil, air, and sound pollution and all these continue to cause major problems. In our quest to better our lives we forget or rather ignore the negative impacts such deeds can have on the environment.

Mostly the cities where there is a lot of population are most affected. The fumes that emanate from factories and vehicles not only make it difficult to breathe but affects the ozone layer.

The major problem brought about by pollution is global warming which has resulted to changes in the global climate patterns. We can no longer predict on what to expect on the different seasons unlike before. Things are so bad that life on earth in general is under great risk.

According to scientists, it's not too late to take action we can take measures to prevent any further damage and adopt better waste disposal measures for a better planet.

Each one of us needs to be responsible in protecting the environment. We can all do things better to ensure we safeguard our human race for our benefit and our future generations. Simple things such as saving electricity, fuel, using biodegradable materials, recycling, among others count in reducing pollution.

We should all aim to better our planet by the simple things we do. Take action now.

BEING A WINNER

You see you were born to win, but to be a winner you must plan to win, prepare to win, and expect to win. The main difference between losers and winners is in what they do. Everyone is a potential winner do not let appearances fool you. Some people are just disguised as losers. A winner is someone who has given his best effort, who tried the hardest he possibly can, utilized every ounce of energy and strength within him to accomplish something. It doesn't mean that they accomplished it or failed, it means they've given it their best. That's winner!

Winners and loser aren't born, they are products of how they think, That's why it's important, not ever to let a soul in the world tell you that, you can't be exactly who you are.

Time: The Most Precious Resource

We have all heard the proverb “Time and tide waits for none” and this is the best-suited proverb as ‘the tide does not wait for anyone’ in the same manner time also does not wait for anyone. Instead, we should make time our Opportunity and grab it as it is really precious and important for our life. Thus we have significant Importance of Time in our life. How you spend your time will almost always reflect your true persona. People spend a great deal of time simply thinking about ways they can change their lives, and how “next year of my life” will be better – but this isn’t true, and is an unfortunate squandering of time. Your life will never change and you won’t all of a sudden start accomplishing your goals – unless of course you make a change right now, at this moment in time. Simply thinking about making a change will almost always result in no change.

By reading the above article, we can easily understand how important time is for all of us. Therefore we should manage our time in a proper way and achieve our goals in life and become a successful person...

CREATIVITY IS A PROCESS NOT AN EVENT

In 1666, one of the most influential scientists in history was strolling through a garden when he was struck with a flash of creative brilliance that would change the world.

While standing under the shade of an apple tree Sir Isaac Newton saw an apple fall to the ground and thus the concept of gravity was born.

The story of falling apple has become one of the lasting and iconic examples of the creative moment.

It is a symbol of the inspired genius that fills your brain during those "eureka moments" when creative conditions are just right.

What most people forget is that Newton worked on his ideas about gravity for nearly twenty years until, in 1687 he published ground breaking book.

The Principia: Mathematical Principle of Natural Philosophy.

The falling apple was nearly the beginning of train of thought that continued for decades.

Newton isn't the only one to wrestle with a great idea for years Creative thinking is a process for all of us अरे ऐसा कोई हमें मिल जाए इतना भी कोई खास नहीं होता .....

अपने हर कदम पर तेरा साथ चाहना हमारी जिंदगी का सबसे बड़ा मकसद बन जाए ...
अरे ऐसे कोई हमें मिल मिले इतना भी कोई खास नहीं होता ...
